

March 08 Newsletter

Volume 2, Issue 3

Wood Turning

Segmented Votive Holders

I love these. Well actually I love all the things that I make; so much that they are hard to sell sometimes. If I did not sell them I would be totally overrun though. I have several boxes of pen blanks and can't find the accessories for my lathe to turn pens, so I needed to try and find another way to use them. That's when I saw a website about segmented wood turning and it inspired several new pieces that can be seen in the photos section of my site.

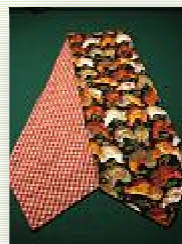

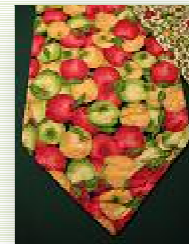

www.mshaneW.net/photos/Turning/index.html

Below are some photos of the newest idea segmented votive holders.

Quilting

I am working on two landscape quilts. No photos of either yet, not that far along. The first one is a scene with a vase of pink tulips in front of a window and you can see a tree and a bush outside. This one has a space in the photos section but it's listed as top secret because it is going to be a gift. The second one is also a gift; I am planning to simulate his house in all the four seasons. This one is not as far along as the other, it's still just a thought in my head actually. I do have some photos this month. Last month I talked about some of the seasonal table runners I have made, this month I have photos of the subject specific table runners enjoy.

Website Updates

- Adding a Forum for questions comments and others who share like interests to share information and ideas.
 - For sale items completed with non-eBay items available for purchase through PayPal.
 - Google ad links related to page content added.
 - Added new links
 - Newsletter subscription page back up and working.
-

Here is the link to photos for the table runners above.

www.mshaneW.net/photos/Quilting/Table_Runners/index4.html